

What is a Tribunal Caseworker?

A Tribunal Caseworker manages asylum and immigration appeals to make sure everything is ready for a Judge to decide your appeal.

What a Tribunal Caseworker does

A Tribunal Caseworker:

- works with you and the Home Office to manage an appeal from start to finish
- looks at any information you or the Home Office send the Tribunal
- tells you or the Home Office what to do at each stage of the appeal and when it needs to be done by
- tells you or the Home Office if there is anything you need to know about your appeal. For example, if you or the Home Office withdraws from the appeal
- may decide to grant or refuse any applications you or the Home Office make to the Tribunal. For example, if you or the Home Office ask for more time
- is not a Judge but does work closely with Judges

If you disagree with a decision a Tribunal Caseworker makes, you have 14 days to ask the Tribunal for a Judge to review the decision.

What a Tribunal Caseworker can't do

A Tribunal Caseworker cannot:

- offer legal advice
- go to a hearing with you
- decide the outcome of your appeal
